

On August 6, 2010, Indianapolis Metropolitan Police officers raided a suspected dog fighting operation.

When police arrived at the home to serve the search warrant, a dog fight was underway. They arrested 23 people, recovered several dogs, drugs, weapons and cash.

Now, 21 of the defendants are out on bond and are expected back in court on September 7, for a pre-trial hearing.

The charges in these cases parallel those from other major animal fighting busts across the county. Animal fighters don't just abuse animals; they also participate in numerous other illegal activities such as gambling and possession and/or sale of illegal drugs and firearms.

There has been a loud public outcry over what can be done to stop animal fighting in our state.

We are responding to that call.

Join Casa Del Toro on Saturday, August 28, as we write letters to the court that will provide a voice for the animals. Stamps, envelopes, and sample letters will be provided.

When

August 28 from 10:00 am to 4:00 pm

Where
